Army Emergency Relief

BY MAJ. GEN. WALTER K. WILSON
Director

SOON after our country entered World War II, General Henry H. Arnold, then Chief of the Army Air Forces, proposed to General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, the organization of an emergency relief agency for the Air Forces.

Maj. Gen. Wilson

General Marshall agreed with the idea but believed such an organization should be created for the entire Army. Honorable Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, approved the plan and, accordingly, Army Emergency Relief was organized in February 1942 with Honorable Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, as the first President, and with General of the Armies John J. Pershing as the first Honorary President. The American Red Cross, concurring in the plan, made a contribution of $1,500,000 to Army Emergency Relief to enable the first distribution of funds to be made to posts throughout the Army. Subsequently, many corporations and individuals responded to the appeal for additional funds. Professional football, baseball, horse-racing, golf, the theater, and other activities all played a leading part. The greatest single contribution was made by "This is the Army," a stage show written and directed by Irving Berlin, which was followed by a motion picture produced by Warner Brothers under the direction of Mr. Berlin. "This is the Army" contributed a total of approximately $9,500,000. The financial arrangements for this project was handled by the Board of Directors of "This is the Army, Inc." consisting of Colonel Charles F. H. Johnson, Mr. A. Berman, and Mr. Francis Gilbert. Many others contributed their time and effort without charge to raising funds for Army Emergency Relief during its initial stages of development, but the list is too long to permit the inclusion of all names in this article.

Lt. Gen. William N. Haskell was the first Director of Army Emergency Relief and was responsible for initiating many of the basic operative procedures and practices. Maj. Gen. Irving J. Phillipson succeeded him as Director and was largely instrumental in raising funds in the amount which was vital to successful operation.

In November 1943, it was realized that in order to prevent duplication of effort and to serve the Army more effectively, it was necessary to coordinate the activities of the American Red Cross and Army

Air Force Board Picks
2,071 Regular Captains

The President this week approved the selection of 2,071 Air Force officers for promotion to the permanent grade of captain.

A selection board, headed by Maj. Gen. Thomas J. Hanley, decided, however, to end the Air Force careers of 34 permanent first lieutenants, previously deferred for promotion and voted to pass over for the first time 228 other officers.

The 34 lieutenants who failed of promotion a second time will be the first Air Force officers to be separated under provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

Under provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, an officer twice passed over is separated from Service on that date which is one year and 30 days subsequent to the date on which he would have been appointed in the next higher grade had he been recommended by the first of two consecutive selection boards.

If the officer is eligible, he may be retired. But if he is not eligible for retirement, he is honorably discharged with severance pay equal to that sum of money computed by multiplying the number of years of service (fractions of a year less than one-half are disregarded; fractions one-half or more are counted as one year) by the amount of base pay and longevity which he would receive at the rate applicable on the date of his elimination for two months' active duty. Total severance pay, however, cannot exceed two years' base and longevity pay so computed.

In answer to an ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL query, Air Force officials said the previous selection board which considered officers for permanent advancement to the rank of captain passed over a total of 50 officers. Of this number, 12 were recommended for promotion by the second board. Three had resigned from the Air Force previously and one had died.

Promotions of the 2,071 officers will be made after 1 July, 1949, as the officers complete seven years of promotion list service.

The selection board reviewed the records of all permanent grade Air Force first lieutenants with date of rank of 1 July, 1946, or earlier, and who will have had seven years of promotion list service prior to 1 July, 1950. It was reported that approximately 2,330 officers were to be considered.

The previous selection board which considered officers for promotion to the permanent rank of captain, reviewed the records of about 1,880 officers, of whom 50 were passed over. Actually, 1,326 promotions to permanent captain were made effective 2 Jan.

A comparison of the conclusions of the two selection boards shows that whereas the first board passed over less than four per cent of the officers considered, the second board passed over more than 11 per cent.

The 228 officers deferred for the first time will be considered by another board

Preserve Marine Corps

Four members of the Senate and 55 members of the House of Representatives simultaneously introduced legislation on 30 June to authorize an "Assistant Secretary of the Navy for the Marine Corps" and to fix a statutory personnel strength for the Corps.

The Corps, under the proposals, would "include land combat and service forces and such aviation as may be organic therein," and the personnel strength would be maintained "at not less than six per cent of combined strengths of the Regular Army, Navy, and Air Force."

The nine members of the House who are in the Marine Corps Reserve have enlisted the interest of their fellow members, with the result that identical bills were introduced.

Navy Studies General Staff

A study is now underway in the Navy Department to determine the feasibility of adopting a system of organization similar to the General Staff of the Army.

Ordered by Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews, at the direction of Defense Secretary Johnson, the study is being made by the Navy General Board.

Headed by Rear Adm. Edmund H. Brough, chairman, the Board has forwarded the study plan to the various Naval bureaus and facilities for comment. As in the case of all studies undertaken by the Board, the returned comments will be studied and discussed by its members, together with their own research work, before a full report is made to the Navy Secretary.

Other members of the Navy General Board are Rear Admirals Robert E. Blick, Jr., and John J. Ballantine, Col. Nels H. Nelson, USMC, and Capt. Chester C. Smith. Secretary of the Board is Capt. N. J. Frank, Jr.

Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said that it is a move toward a powerful general staff for all of the military services, and one which the Nation must guard against.

Regular Army Appointments

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL was told late this week that the Army is preparing to submit for Presidential approval a list of Regular Army appointments under provisions of Circular 382. Affected would be college graduates with one year of service during the war who are receiving direct appointments.

Also, it was reported that the list of successful candidates completing competitive tours on 15 July probably will be ready for release early in September. Although the final number to be appointed is not yet definite, expectation is that from 200 to 300 new Regular Army appointments will be made in this group.

Study of Service Pay
Bill Pushed in Senate

The Senate Armed Services Committee in three active sessions this week completed detailed consideration of those sections of the Pay Bill relating to definitions, pay and allowances. At a meeting on next Tuesday morning it will consider the provisions relating to disability retirement and probably on Wednesday will discuss the miscellaneous provisions. It is probable that the committee will take final action on the measure late next week, or early the following week.

Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D-Md.) and other members of the Senate Armed Services Committee expressed great interest in the comparison between salaries of the officers of the Uniformed Services and those of Foreign Service officers of the State Department which was published in last week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Senator Tydings made the article a part of the committee record and directed the professional staff of the committee to make a study of the comparative compensation of these classes of Government officers. An analysis of the pay scales shows that in comparable grades the Foreign Service officers receive substantially higher pay than do those of the military services.

The sessions of the committee this week were not open to the public, but the members said considerable progress had been made, with only relatively minor amendments suggested. Representatives of the Armed Services met with the committee and went over the bill, section by section. Some members of the House, who had opposed the bill in its present form, met with the committee on Thursday and urged changes which would eliminate hazard pay for officers of the higher ranks and equalize the amounts for other ranks. They also favored higher pay schedules for enlisted men and junior officers.

Among the changes suggested by committee members and tentatively approved were a clearer definition of dependents, elimination of authority for the President to extend classification of hazardous duties in time of war, and a more specific authorization of quarters in kind for the enlisted men, in the lower grades, without dependents. The committee requested additional information on the effect of the change in sea and foreign service pay for enlisted men in the lowest grades.

The amendment relating to dependents referred particularly to a definition of illegitimate dependent children. The matter of authorizing the President to limit or extend hazardous duty classifications in time of war received considerable attention. The bill as it passed the House gives the President discretionary authority in time of war to add to or reduce the various types of duties for which extra compensation would be given. The Senate committee felt the President should be authorized to reduce, but not to extend such classifications. With reference to quarters for enlisted personnel of the lower grades, without dependents, the Paulsboro Courier Journal—“Miss Betty Grable, possessor of a pair of pretty legs, was paid $208,000 in 1947, according to a Treasury Department announcement of a few days ago . . . High military officers, in whose hands might be the lives of thousands of men and millions—if not billions—of dollars worth of equipment, are struggling along on a pay system which dates back to 1908. Their 1949 expenses bear no more relation to those of 1908 than the costumes of Miss Grable bear to those of Lillian Russell.”

St. Louis Post-Dispatch—“Senator Flanders now declares that if the Armed Forces receive an increase in pay, so should all other government employees. Perhaps he does not know that since 1908, when the last comprehensive adjustment was made, General officers pay has gone up only 10 per cent . . . If the Armed Forces are to have good leadership on which all depends in time of war, they must pay for it.”

San Antonio Express—“What business is it of Congress, whether a retired general goes fishing, or into some other work? That question does not figure in private enterprise retirement systems. Perhaps it is unkind, but necessary, to remind Senator Byrd that when Congress voted itself a 50 per cent pay raise in 1946, it also rendered its members eligible for civil service pensions. Should a retiring Senator be barred from drawing that compensation if, say, he should go in to a lucrative law practice?”

San Francisco Examiner—“It is to be regretted that all of our occupation authorities have not been able to deal as effectively with the Russians as General MacArthur, who not only deals with them in a manner they can understand but probably holds their respect more than any other representative of the western powers.”

If the time should ever come when the Marine Corps, or any other branch, would no longer fit into the sensible system of defense, we should be prepared to give it up. Fortunately for our traditional pride in the Leathernecks, that time does not appear to be at hand. But if it comes we should not shrink from it.”

Ft. Wayne (Ind.) News-Sentinel—“The recent crackdown on Army, Navy and Air Force officials use of Government cars for their personal convenience, leaves us wondering why this step had been put off for so long. The auto order is only one evidence of a toughness that injects a new note into our military. We don’t know how long it will last; we hope the new policies will survive the brass hat barrage they are sure to encounter.”

Gen. Bradley on Military Policy

The need for a long-range military policy for the United States, costing less money and producing more effective combined forces, was stressed this week by General Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff.

The reasoning which says we can prevent war by being so strong that no one will attack us, is erroneous General Bradley said, because it costs more than we can afford. “We must seek a better solution,” he said, adding that one way “to meet the modern warfare requirements” is by maintaining “as a ready mobile force, the smallest self-contained organization capable of major battle accomplishments.”

The full text of General Bradley’s speech, made at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., 1 July is printed below.

“If we Americans are to forge a long-range military policy which will endure, it must be internationally astute, and nationally within our means. Strategic plans for future defense can only be as valid as the peacetime preparations we can afford. Soldiers, sailors, and airmen must provide the United States with the sturdiest defense available, within the price we can pay.

“That this is a very real, and very limiting factor, no one can deny. For we cannot afford to maintain over a long period of time the established forces that can assure a quick victory.

“However, we can afford—and must afford—sufficient forces in being, including the mobilization base and necessary reinforcements, to avert disaster in event we are attacked.

“In four years we demobilized an Army, a Navy, and an Air Force until they were little more than occupation forces in foreign lands. For the cycle of reestablishing a planned and ready military stature we have reacted jerkily, spasmodically, to the stress and the tension from outside sources. In this atmosphere, a truly long-range policy was only a conversation piece.

Basis for Combat Readiness

“Today in our armed forces, we have reached a stability which in my opinion can be the basis of the combat readiness which will avert disaster. With additional effort, and a little more time, we can build the forces now planned into reliable guardians of defense.

“Militarily speaking, the situation is as stable as it is going to be for some time to come. In the four years since V-J Day I think the advantage has swung to our side and that the aggressor, who was once a friend, is now on the defensive.

“Rather than expect a long period of friendly cooperation, however, we must anticipate a long period of tension, with alternating day-to-day improvements or set-backs, which must not be allowed to destabilize the long-range plans for security. The American citizen must evidence a resoluteness and constancy that will signal our new stand for protected, secure freedoms. He will draw courage and strength for his own progress, and will reinforce the faith of our friends in western Europe. The U. S. security dollar will be invested in long-term bonds which are bound to pay off in defense dividends and decreased costs. Better plans can be made, greater economies effected, and our allies can confidently chart their courses.

“Since you are students of American foreign policy as well as military preparedness, you are interested in a consideration of the basic ingredients of a sound long-range military policy for the United States, which is an integrated plan of our peaceful intention and our military potential.

Must Cost Less

“First, under present conditions, it must cost much less than we are spending now.

“Second, considering the enemies we may sometime face, our combined forces must be more effective than they are today.

“In speaking of effectiveness—or combat readiness as the military man would term it—our greatest danger is that we will be caught up in the fancy of a futurism, and commit ourselves to unbalanced forces that will not match the forces which might oppose us.

“When I speak of balance, I don’t mean the dividing of funds equally among three services; nor do I mean an equation of so many ships equal to so many soldiers equal to so many air groups, to create a pattern on a chart.

“When I speak of balance, I mean effective forces equal to the tasks that modern warfare may thrust upon us. And in striking this balance we must include that which can be reliably contributed by our allies. We can upset this equilibrium by committing ourselves, not strategically, nor numerically, but financially, to plans which on the surface may seem proper, but tomorrow tower over us in burdensome upkeep.

“So, as a third basic ingredient, I consider balanced forces—as I understand balance—as most essential.

“This guiding principle of economy, effectiveness and balanced preparedness applies equally, in my judgment, to all three of the armed forces. We cannot afford to spend more money than is absolutely essential on any one of the services merely to satisfy an emotional appeal. Every dollar spent must be strategically productive, for either national bankruptcy or a lack of preparedness will satisfy a lurking aggressor.

Long-Range Policy

“Long-range policy must be accompanied by long-range budget plans. Piecemeal attacks cannot be mounted forever. And in our year-to-year consideration of the budget, we must look ahead at least four or five years.

“We cannot afford to spend six billion dollars in the enlargement of a particular service that may require seven billion dollars to maintain the next year, and perhaps eight billion dollars to maintain and improve in the succeeding year, unless we realize and fully intend the long-range effect that this will have on our future capabilities.

“For example—and it is only a hypothetical picture—if we decide in Fiscal Year 1953 that we can afford only 12 billion dollars of the federal funds for the armed forces, and in the present Fiscal Year we launched a long-range program for one service that will in three years demand eight billion dollars, or a 12 billion dollar budget, then we would end up with a National Military Establishment entirely out of balance to meet an emergency. We would have nullified our effectiveness ad decidedly compromised our security.

“Long-range military policy must ultimately be interpreted by men with missions, trained and equipped to perform them. Civilians must set the policy, but they will continue to rely upon their trusted military advisers for the practical applications. Without sacrificing any of the economies of progress which can be opened by modern research and invention, some down-to-earth readiness must be the foundation of our present plans. This is our most pressing military problem.

“American ingenuity has been admired and respected by men everywhere. With the American soldier, the field expedient has often created sterling success from foredoomed impossibility; with inventive genius he has often provided abundance from scarcity.

“Nationally, we are faced with a similar problem. And today every planner must put this ingenuity to work on the ‘big-picture’ scale.

Prevent War

“The American people are anxious for the first sign that we can positively win the victory in any future war. However, our plans can best provide for victory by preventing another war. Many soldiers and even more statesmen have worked toward the goal of winning the war without firing a shot. I believe that we can contribute greatly to this possibility for the United States. Success in this effort would be the ultimate in economy—of lives, of resources, of American standards of living.

“You are all familiar with the precept that another way to prevent war is to be so strong that no one will attack us. In this day and age, however, this method of war prevention is too expensive. We must seek a better solution.

“Another method would be to reestablish through the coalition of friendly nations, the military power to back our peaceful intention if challenged. In concert with the other signers of the Atlantic Pact, we may ultimately achieve this. In that event smaller forces, readily available and readily capable of expansion might be relied upon. Our strength would lie in collective action and political combination backed by efficient, expandable forces. These forces must be ready and capable of keeping a toe-hold on any continent which may ultimately become the battlefield. Our economy is thus linked to theirs; our foreign policy to their international ways and means.

Nature of Modern War

“As graduate students in the art and science of warfare, it is not necessary that I discuss with you the nature of modern warfare which will dictate our fundamental forces. We all recognize that we must have first and foremost, a strategic air force, second to none, equipped with the ultimate in weapons that our research and development can provide. And our plans must be so complete, that we know the application of this force and its armaments, will help carry us to the position we nationally wish to achieve, when the war is over.

“With me, you undoubtedly plan for a Navy, with its air arm, and its essential Marine units, for the fulfillment of the Navy’s offensive and defensive missions, including the assistance that the Army and the Air Force must have to project the battle as far from our own shores as possible.

“We must have a tactical air force, for every soldier knows that the fighter-bomber combination with the infantry, artillery, and tanks, is the only practical battlefield force in modern war.

“Before presenting the detailed problem I would like to have you consider, I would add one more thought on modern warfare. It is essential for all of us to realize that successful modern war demands that the victor put continuous pressure on the enemy, for modern battle is a unified and continuing effort. To win, we must pour on a series of continuing blows, rising to a crescendo of intensity and fierceness, until the enemy and his war-making potential crumbles. It is essential that no phase should fall off in intensity and thus allow him to catch his breath, and recuperate from the latest blow to prepare for the next. If he is a strong foe, he may seize the opportunity, if there is a lag, to strike a telling blow back.

“With economy our yardstick and preparedness our pattern, then let us estimate the size and composition of the American Army that fits the pattern—smaller, less expensive defense forces for a nation which is a member of a coalition. In analyzing the requirements, we must provide an answer to the question: What size Army must we—and shall we—maintain for the long run?

Ready Force

“To meet the modern warfare requirements, we must maintain as a ready mobile force, the smallest, self-contained organization, capable of major battle accomplishments. And we must have, to go with it, the reinforcements, the mobilization base, the special-mission units for bases we must seize and hold. This is not nearly so large an Army as some might imagine.

“This ready force must have good soldiers trained to assume greater positions of responsibility. In an extreme, perhaps, every private should be a potential first sergeant. These men must be trained not in just one type of warfare, but in many, and for many climates, and many strange conditions.

“I think this is the place to put in a necessary caution. Too many planners, failing to consider our national dearth of manpower in comparison with other nations, think in terms of large special forces—divisions capable of only amphibious work—or divisions capable of only airborne work. This is shortsighted. In the American armed forces we must have every division—in fact, every combat soldier—trained to fight as infantry, and with the infantry, on the ground.

“That this force must be mobile both tactically and strategically is a foregone conclusion. And if it is to be committed overseas, the necessary shipping must be readily available in the exact numbers and types of ships we need. Ports, and port battalions, must exist as transportation support in being.

“Trained men, and waiting ships are not enough. This force-in-being which must be ready and capable of keeping a toe-hold on any continent which may ultimately become the battlefield. Our economy is thus linked to theirs; our foreign policy to their international ways and means.

Industrial Production

“Even with our generous industrial production, any future American Army must leave an absolutely clean battlefield. We cannot expect industry to provide, nor a soldier to carry, any item he does not use. This applies, too, to every other soldier who must support the advance of the ground Army.

“To save themselves in order to win the battle, the American G. I. must be the best equipped, the best protected, and the man with the lightest load. This includes his rifle, his ammunition, his clothing, his food. I don’t believe that American ingenuity has been completely applied to this ultimate economy-plus-effectiveness problem.

“Lighten the soldier’s load, and at the same time decrease the weight of his supporting guns and their ammunition—and we may in the sum total, provide, through research and careful development, an airborne Army. By effecting this helpful economy, and by constant effort to use less of the strategically critical raw materials in our arms, we may be able to lower the steel and munitions requirements to the point that we can provide a victory at lower cost—in living standards as well as lives.

“Finally, in general objective, this ready force must know its mission, and more than that, must like it. It cannot be a one-shot task force for a suicide attempt. Plans made for its employment must include a realistic concept of the logistical support, and the reinforcements, needed for its sustained mission. As we work out its speedy transportation with the Navy and the Air, we must provide the tactical air groups to push the divisions forward, and to maintain air superiority wherever possible.

Reserve and National Guard

“If this force is available, and we provide in our Army the schooling system, the depots and storage plants, the necessary Reserve and National Guard training assistance, we can meet the first requirement of a modern war at the same time strategic air launches the retaliatory attack.

“These are unusual and most difficult requirements. However, they are not beyond the capabilities of good planning, forward thinking soldiers. And I urge you in the months to come to apply your minds and your education to this problem.

“As a basis of discussion I suggest one possible solution: Can the United States afford an Army striking force of any less than a completely ready, reinforced Corps, balanced in division types, capable of sustained action, for the backbone of its long-range modern Army?

“This is not a time for classroom problems. After all, you have completed a year of rigorous study, in a limited professional field. American military success has been founded on similar study by soldiers before you. Each of them had the capability of envisioning greater problems, and at the same time inventing more practical answers than their predecessors.

Professional Education

"A review of World War II and its outcome has confirmed in my own mind the belief that the Army system of professional education which was revitalized and expanded after World War I was one of the greatest contributions to the winning of World War II. For it provided us, in our small nucleus of Regular Army officers, and our larger complement of National Guard and Reserve officers, with skilled leadership as well as staff procedures which competently faced the tough tactical and strategic problems thrust upon us.

"Today, as you graduate from the Command and General Staff College you join the ranks of those soldiers who have a common professional education aimed toward the solution of higher staff and command problems. Your selection to attend this school is evidence of the Army's faith in your potential for assuming greater responsibility in the case of war. It is especially appropriate that we have discussed future plans and policies, and necessary economies with you here today.

"One final word to the future commanders and staff officers in the American Army. Keep within these possibilities as you plan: The American Army can be no different than the American people. If our national aptitudes are mechanization, initiative, ingenuity, individuality, we must never attempt to suppress them. A man's religion and his politics are his own affair and must always continue to be. And if a man's respect for his superiors is based on an appreciation of the intelligence and ability of his leaders, then the leaders we offer him must have these better talents.

"In your future military careers, I wish you and your families continued success and much happiness. As American citizens you are expected to be outstanding."

Army Generals

The Department of the Army this week made public the long-delayed list of Army officers selected for promotion to permanent major general and brigadier general. Those on the list were chosen by a board of general officers headed by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr.

After approval by the Chief of Staff and the Secretary of the Army the list was forwarded to the White House but was not finally approved by the President until this week. It is understood that the delay was due to the change in the office of Secretary of the Army, the President having awaited the recommendation of Secretary Gordon Gray, who only recently assumed office.

The list contains the names of 10 officers selected for promotion to the permanent rank of major general, 6 for the permanent rank of brigadier general, 4 for temporary rank of major general and 11 for temporary rank of brigadier general. Other officers designated for temporary advanced rank have already been promoted.

Of those designated for permanent promotion to major general four have already been appointed and confirmed in this rank. The others designated for permanent and temporary promotion will be advanced as vacancies occur, but all are expected to be promoted during the next six months. The reason why there were fewer selected for permanent promotion to brigadier general than to major general is that the previous eligible list for this rank has not yet been exhausted.

Maj. Gen. Stanley L. Scott, the senior officer on the list of those selected for permanent promotion to major general, was No. 12 among the brigadier generals selected last year, while Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Casey, the junior on the new major general's list, was No. 33 on last year's list of those selected for brigadier general. Four of the six on this year's selection list for brigadier general now hold the temporary rank of major general and the other two are temporary brigadier generals.

Those selected this year for permanent major general, the top four of whom have already been confirmed in this rank, are:

Maj. Gen. Stanley L. Scott
Maj. Gen. Roderick R. Allen
Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist
Maj. Gen. Lester J. Whitlock
Maj. Gen. Ray T. Maddocks
Maj. Gen. Harry J. Collins
Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure
Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks
Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Casey

The officers selected to be permanent brigadier general are:

Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr.
Maj. Gen. Isaac D. White
Maj. Gen. Carter B. Magruder
Maj. Gen. William F. Dean
Maj. Gen. William H. Arnold
Brig. Gen. George W. Smythe
Brig. Gen. Josef R. Sheetz
Brig. Gen. William A. Beiderlinden
Brig. Gen. Reuben E. Jenkins
Brig. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard

Officers selected for temporary promotion to brigadier general, several of whom were general officers during the war, are:

Col. Harold E. Eastwood
Col. Andrew C. Tychsen
Col. Laurin L. Williams
Col. Raymond E. S. Williamson
Col. William L. Barriger
Col. George B. Barth
Col. Carter W. Clarke
Col. Halley G. Maddox
Col. James C. Fry
Col. William S. Biddle
Col. Gerson K. Heiss

Sec. Gray and the Nat. Guard

In response to inquiries from the press this week both Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray denied that assurances had been given to anyone by either of them relative to the future of the National Guard. Mr. Johnson said that this was a matter that would come under the new National Military Establishment Civilian Components Policy Board, the members of which have not yet been selected.

Secretary Johnson in a recent address at the National War College said that the chairmanship of the Board had been tendered to former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. It is understood that Mr. Patterson has the matter under consideration, but has not yet accepted the appointment. In view of the fact that the position would be a full-time job there is some question as to whether Mr. Patterson will be able to accept.

The question as to the assurances concerning the future of the National Guard arose out of a joint statement made by Maj. Gen. E. A. Walsh, Adjutant General of Minnesota, and President of the National Guard Association, and Maj. Gen. William H. Harrison, Jr., Adjutant General of Massachusetts, and president of the Adjutant Generals Association. This statement, published in full in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of 11 June, was made at the time the appointment of Mr. Gray as Secretary of the Army was under consideration by the Senate. Some question had arisen as to whether the National Guard would support Mr. Gray's appointment in view of the recommendation of the Gray Board for the Federalization of the Guard, a proposal bitterly opposed by Governors and Adjutants General of the various states.

The statement of Generals Walsh and Harrison declared that "in view of certain assurances with reference to the future of the Guard" the two associations would support the confirmation of Mr. Gray.

Subsequently Mr. Gray received an inquiry from the Journal and Evening Bulletin of Providence, R. I., concerning the assurances given. Mr. Gray replied.

Mr. Claude Witze
The Providence Journal and The Evening Bulletin
Providence 2, Rhode Island

Dear Mr. Witze:

I have your letter of June 21, in which you make inquiry concerning a story about me in the Army and Navy Journal of June 11, 1949, and as to whether I have made any "assurances" with reference to the future of the Guard."

The Committee on Civilian Components—or so-called Gray Board—was appointed by Secretary of Defense Forrestal, and reported to him.

Action on the report itself is a matter to be determined by the Secretary of Defense, not by the Secretary of the Army. As to some of the more controversial aspects of this report, the Secretary of Defense has taken no action.

Secretary of Defense Johnson has appointed a Civilian Component Policy Board which will, presumably, consider matters of this nature.

To the best of my recollection, I have not discussed this report—or its recommendations—with anyone in several months. Specifically answering your questions, I have neither been asked to give, nor have I given, any "assurances" whatsoever.

I trust that this answers your inquiry sufficiently.

Sincerely,
Gordon Gray,
Secretary of the Army

The "assurances" referred to by Generals Walsh and Harrison may have related to a conference held by Secretary of Defense Johnson in his office on 18 May attended by representatives of the Regular services and the civilian components. At this meeting the group was presented with a proposed directive for the appointment of a Civilian Components Policy Board of 20 members, including a civilian chairman, an executive officer and three sections representing the Army, Navy and Air Force, each with six members. On the Army section there would be two Regular officers, two National Guard officers, and two Reserve officers; on the Navy section there would be one Regular Navy officer, one Regular Marine officer, two Naval Reserve officers, and two Marine Reserve officers; and on the Air section two Regular Air officers, two National Guard officers and two Reserve officers. This membership would give the Reserve components a substantial majority of the committee.

In an article in the July issue of the National Guardsman, official publication of the National Guard Association, General Walsh referred to this conference and warmly praised the concept of the new Board. He said the National Guard representatives at the conference felt that the Board would materially enhance the development of the civilian components of the Armed Forces and fortify the security of the nation. Such a Board, he said, would have the full faith and confidence of the citizen soldiers.

Defends "Brass Hats"

Bernard M. Baruch this week lashed out at critics of military brass hats and expressed his stolid opposition to those who would attempt to force military leaders into "secondary citizenship."

In a speech delivered at commencement exercises commemorating the 25th Anniversary of the formation of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Mr. Baruch declared it "one of the marvels of American history that our Armed Forces have not failed us in time of war, despite the treatment given them during peace."

Appealing for enactment of pay increases for military personnel, Mr. Baruch said, "the pay we civilians give our soldiers has never been commensurate with the responsibilities we thrust upon them. That is particularly true now, when inflation has slashed the real value of all pensions, savings and salaries. Grave responsibilities with inadequate reward and exposure to unfair criticism is too often the lot of occupants of the Pentagon."

Mr. Baruch warned that "we should stop thinking that the soldier is set apart from the rest of the people" and explained that "the whole thesis that there exists some deep fundamental cleavage between 'civilians' and 'military' in American life breaks down on examination."

"The soldiers who have been called upon to function in spheres apart from their profession of arms have rung up enviable records. Our occupation commanders—MacArthur, Clay, Clark, Hodges—have handled themselves with ability and tact, with justice and firmness. They, their officers and enlisted men, have won new respect for the United States."

"In Bedell Smith we had an excellent ambassador to Soviet Russia. Admiral Kirk is a worthy successor."

"There has been no more capable administrator of veteran affairs than General Omar Bradley. Less conspicuous, but no less real, was the ability shown by Marine General Erskine as Retraining Administrator in an impossible situation."

"No Secretary of State has been less militaristic and more devoted to searching for peace than General Marshall."

"Our civilian life has been greatly enriched by the addition of professional soldiers, General Eisenhower being only the most recent example."

"There is no basis for the accusation that our military leaders think exclusively in terms of war. Today, the professional soldier is trained in the arts of peace as well as those of war. That, as you know, has been one of the objectives of this Industrial College.

"I know of no group who have been so loyal to the country as a whole. The question never arises of protecting one region—say New York or Texas—at the expense of others. The military has always thought of the whole national interest, which is more than can be said for some of their critics."

"By whom have American liberties been threatened in the past? By the military? Or by reckless civilian politicians and rabblerousers? The role of the soldier in the United States has always been that of the protector of our liberties. In times of peace all too many people have tended to jeer at members of our armed forces, to laugh off their warnings, to give little heed to what they have sought for defense. Then, suddenly, war erupts! The much-maligned military are expected to spend billions in furious yet efficient haste, to recruit and train in a matter of months millions of men who never held a rifle before, to organize global operations touching places most Americans had never heard of. Certainly it is one of the marvels of American history that our armed forces have not failed us in time of war, despite the treatment given them during peace."

The American people, said Mr. Baruch, "are currently in the throes of tormenting, frustrating readjustment." He maintained that the necessity "to adjust to the inexorable continuity between peace and war which prevails in our world will force revolutionary changes in the thinking of the military as well as civilians. In the past, for example, defense appropriations fluctuated wildly in a feast and famine cycle. Unfortunately, our budgetary habits are still attuned to that cycle. For the cold war we must scale defense expenditures so they can be sustained indefinitely—paced to the needs of changing world developments—without overburdening our economy."

"Our military strength cannot be permitted to lapse to where it invites aggression. Neither dare we overload our economic system with destructive, unnecessary taxes or to divert so large a proportion of our resources from productive use so that living standards cannot continue to be lifted. The cold war is as total as actual war. It requires not military readiness alone, but a strategy embracing all fronts, a strategy which rises above the race of selfish groups who seek to better themselves at the expense of others, even to where it endangers our very government."

In a tribute to the services of the nation's military leaders, Mr. Baruch concluded:

"For more than half a century I have been associated with members of the armed forces. In all that time I have never met a so-called military man who was not as fervently desirous for peace as the ordinary civilian. I have watched the defense agencies spend billions and, while there have been lapses, on the whole the record has been better than any comparable operation in civil life. Nor have I ever detected in the military any tendency to usurp power or to do anything other than safe-guard our freedoms."

"The men who commanded on land and sea and in the air and those whom they

Col. James L. McKinnon Retires

Col. James L. McKinnon, TC, post commander at Camp Kilmer, N. J., during the closing months of 1948, was retired from active service 30 June at the New York Port of Embarkation.

A veteran of World War II operations on Utah Beach in Normandy, he later helped operate the famed Red Ball Express through France and Belgium. Colonel McKinnon went to Luzon in the Philippines in 1946 to help supervise construction of airfields and dependent housing facilities. He returned to the states in 1947 and during his assignment at Kilmer was instrumental in paving the way for the post's 1200 garden-type apartments of Kilmer Village, to be constructed here soon. Colonel McKinnon and his family will make their home at Talladega Springs, Ala.

UNITED STATES ARMY

May Increase Land Force

An indication that the Army is striving to increase the number of ground combat forces was reported in an address delivered late last week by Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, commanding general, Command and General Staff College, in an address before the 4th Armored Division convention at Philadelphia, Pa.

"The national policy as it is now developing may well establish a need to revise our military forces, particularly in the creation of additional Army combat forces," General Eddy declared.

He said "the land power of the United States is now in the process of being increased to a limited extent."

In his address, General Eddy called for a program of education to inform the public on military matters. He said that widespread ignorance of military affairs is dangerous and noted that "every conceivable subject other than national security is studied in our civilian schools." He added that "neither the problems of national security nor the citizen's responsibility toward the Armed Forces are normally made clear to our people."

Brig. Gen. Badger Retires

Col. George M. Badger, Treasurer of the U. S. Military Academy, was retired in the rank of Brigadier General at ceremonies held 24 June at West Point, N. Y. He came to the Academy Oct. 31, 1945, from the European Theater where he commanded the 56th Anti-Aircraft Brigade attached to the U. S. 9th Air Force.

General and Mrs. Badger will make their new home at 1865 Stearns Avenue, Long Beach, Calif. They have three sons, Lt. Frederick C., George M., Jr., and Robert W. Badger, all residing in California.

General Badger will be succeeded as Academy Treasurer by Colonel Robert G. Gard, formerly of Second Army Headquarters, Ft. Meade, Md.

Emergency Relief. Accordingly, on 6 February 1944 an agreement between these two organizations was approved by the Secretary of War, and this agreement still remains in effect. Under terms of the agreement, the American Red Cross, because of its organization with its thousands of local chapters and its financial resources, accepted the primary mission of assisting Army personnel and their dependents in emergencies requiring aid. Army Emergency Relief was given the mission of supplementing the American Red Cross in all those cases in which emergency financial assistance was not available through the American Red Cross.

The Army Relief Society which was founded in 1900, and has for nearly fifty years been continuously and efficiently assisting needy widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel, continued this worthwhile work. Army Emergency Relief agreed to reimburse Army Relief Society for assistance given to needy widows and orphans of all other Army personnel (not Regular Army) dying while on extended active duty. The Air Force Aid Society was authorized to begin separate operations on 1 March 1946 and Army Emergency Relief agreed to turn over to it one-third of the assets of Army Emergency Relief as of 28 February 1946. The share of the Air Force Aid Society amounted to $4,223,005.12.

While during the period of hostilities the average annual disbursements in loans and grants amounted to approximately $3,000,000, after hostilities ceased and the demobilization began, this average naturally decreased. In the year 1948, Army Emergency Relief disbursed over $600,000 in loans and grants in rendering emergency financial assistance in more than 8500 individual cases. This was disbursed by 92 active sections operating under commanding officers of posts and camps and through American Red Cross Chapters in communities. The Army Emergency Relief Section on each post is administered by an Army Emergency Relief Officer for the post commander, and he has on hand at all times sufficient funds to meet local requirements. Approximately 83% of all disbursements are in the form of loans because a large percentage of borrowers desire and are able later to repay their loans in full in small monthly installments. Not to seek repayments when they can be made without causing real hardship would tend to undermine character, which the Army endeavors to develop. It speaks well for the Army that loan repayments have averaged about 80%.

In the small pre-war Army of about one-sixth the strength of our peace-time Army of today, there was usually no local agency at the disposal of a post commander to render financial assistance to active soldiers and their dependents when emergencies suddenly arose. Since Army Relief Society funds were available only for widows and orphans, there was frequently only one course open to a commanding officer to assist an active soldier or his dependents, and that was to resort to the practice of "passing the hat." As commendable as it was, this method at its best was haphazard and inefficient compared to the services now being rendered by Army Emergency Relief, and in addition naturally proved embarrassing to most recipients. As a result, Army Emergency Relief has been approved by the Secretary of the Army as a post-war agency to fill this need.

Real emergencies to soldiers and their families are certain to arise in time of peace as well as war. Army Emergency Relief is organized to render emergency financial assistance at local levels. The post commander with an Army Emergency Relief Section can use Army Emergency Relief funds in an amount not to exceed $250 on a single case and if more is necessary may obtain authority from National Headquarters. From numerous letters received from commanders throughout the Army, it is being more generally used and its value more appreciated. Many Commanding Generals have stated that the availability of funds for emergency financial assistance to Army personnel and their families is now recog-

As no Government funds are provided to furnish emergency financial assistance to Army personnel and their dependents, Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society must rely on voluntary contributions of members of the Army and their friends in order to raise sufficient funds for use in loans and grants. A Joint Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society Annual Fund Campaign for that purpose was inaugurated in 1947 and subsequently, a similar campaign has been conducted each year.

Under the by-laws of Army Emergency Relief, the Secretary of the Army is the Chairman of the Board of Governors and appoints the President of Army Emergency Relief, The Honorary President, and the Director. For the President, the Director administers the organization under policies established by the Board of Managers. Honorable Gordon Gray, Secretary of the Army, is now Chairman of the Board of Governors. Honorable Tracy S. Voorhees, Assistant Secretary of the Army, is now the President, and General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower is the Honorary President.

AER-ARS Annual Fund Campaign

Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society will conduct their joint annual fund campaign for all active Army personnel in Washington and its vicinity during the last week of July and first week of August.

A joint campaign is conducted to enable both organizations to raise necessary funds in a single campaign rather than having each conduct a separate campaign. One hundred per cent of all funds raised are available for use in rendering emergency financial assistance to soldiers and their dependents. Army Relief Society will receive 20 per cent of all contributions based on the comparative disbursements of the two organizations during the past year.

In 1948 Army Emergency Relief disbursed over $600,000 in loans and grants to Army personnel on active duty and their dependents. Army Relief Society, on the other hand, assists needy widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel and on a reimbursement basis from Army Emergency Relief assists needy widows and orphans of other Army personnel (not Regular Army), dying while on extended active duty.

The Board of Managers of Army Emergency Relief favors obtaining a large number of small voluntary contributions rather than seeking large contributions. It is believed that every member of the Army should make a small contribution once each year to this campaign in order to have available sufficient funds to make loans or grants to soldiers or their families when faced with emergencies requiring financial assistance.

Donald F. Carpenter Honored

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson last week presented the NME Certificate of Appreciation to Donald F. Carpenter, retiring Chairman of the Munitions Board.

Mr. Carpenter has left to return to the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, Inc., from which he has been on leave of absence since April, 1948.

The citation stated:

"Donald F. Carpenter, for exceptionally meritorious service to the National Military Establishment from April 8, 1948, to June 24, 1949. At the request of the Secretary of Defense, Mr. Carpenter left his civilian occupation to assume the Chairmanship of the Military Liaison Committee to the Atomic Energy Commission. In this capacity, Mr. Carpenter demonstrated unusual tact and ability in developing military atomic energy programs and under his guidance and direction military atomic energy activities were materially furthered. In September, 1948, Mr. Carpenter was appointed by the President to serve as Chairman of the Munitions Board. Faced with unprecedented problems in supply, distribution, storage and procurement, Mr. Carpenter showed remarkable initiative and zeal in directing comprehensive studies and developing effective solutions. His service to the government is deserving of the highest praise."

TELEPHONE SERVICE KEEPERS RIGHT ON IMPROVING

Long Distance is faster. Calls go through on the average in 1.6 minutes—nine times out of ten while you hold the line.

Local Service is better. The operator answers or the dial tone comes on faster than at any time since before the war. Calls go through promptly and accurately.

Equipment troubles are fewer than ever. Those reported by customers have decreased 15% from a year ago.

THE big construction program of the Bell System has resulted in important improvements in telephone service, and has brought telephones to millions of people who did not have them before.

Thousands of miles of new Long Distance lines have been added. Many cities are now linked by networks which can carry both voice and television. New and modern Western Electric equipment—the finest that can be made—is giving better, clearer, faster service to millions of telephone users, on every kind of call.

There has never been so great an expansion and improvement in telephone service as in the past three years. Still more good things are ahead for we're keeping right on with the job.

"Beef Up" Naval Aviation

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson believes that Naval aviation should be "beefed up" rather than diminished, according to Under Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball.

Mr. Kimball, addressing the 12th Annual National Reunion of the Naval Club of the United States, at Purdue University last week, said that the Defense Secretary had expressed this belief in a recent conversation. "Considering the agreed on roles and missions of the Navy," Mr. Kimball said, "I certainly believe Mr. Johnson was right."

Pointing out that Secretary Johnson had only recently reaffirmed the roles and missions of the Navy and Marine Corps, the Navy Under Secretary emphasized that "to carry them out we certainly must have a strong Navy made up of the best people we can get. The Navy," he said, "requires men able to maintain and to fly all types of aircraft except heavy bombers."

Mr. Kimball also mentioned that the Navy "is involved in the whole range of guided missiles, airborne, seaborne, and ashore," and that "one of the Navy's most important projects, the improvement of rocket motors," is being carried out at Purdue.

Admiral Kirk in Moscow

Admiral Alan G. Kirk, recently named Ambassador to Russia by President Truman, arrived in Moscow this week to assume his new duties.

A 1905 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, Admiral Kirk was retired on 1 March, 1946, after completing forty-one years of active service.

Naval Officers Retire

Two officers now serving on the staff of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., Capt. Randall E. Dees and Capt. Gail Morgan, were retired 30 June, each with the rank of Commodore. The former is a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy in the class of 1917 and the latter was graduated in 1916.

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Naval Captains To Be Retained

President Truman on 25 June signed Public Law 131, which amends section 312 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, to provide for the retention on the active list of certain officers of the Medical and Dental Corps of the Navy.

Under the 1947 Act, Staff Corps captains who had completed 31 years of service faced the possibility of involuntary retirement. The act specified that only 22 officers in the Medical Corps and 12 in the Dental Corps from this group could be recommended for continuation on the active list by a selection board and could only be so continued until the report of the next succeeding selection board was approved. The remainder were to have been placed on the retired list on June 30, 1949.

The new law provides that a certain number of captains, to be determined by the Secretary of the Navy, shall be continued on the active list to meet the needs of the service, with the provision that until 30 June, 1952, no such officer should be involuntarily retired prior to reaching the age of 62.

There are at present over 40 officers in the grade of Captain in the Medical Corps eligible for recommendation for continuation on the active list. While a similar condition did not exist in the Dental Corps prior to the passage of this law, it was anticipated that it would arise when the next selection board was convened.

Navy Officer Heads College

Capt. Herbert J. Grassie, who retired from the Navy this week with the rank of rear admiral, has been appointed Chancellor of the Lewis College of Science and Technology, Lockport, Ill.

Admiral Grassie, who had been serving as Commandant of the Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, was named by Bishop Bernard J. Shell, president of the college, on 28 June. During the war, Admiral Grassie commanded the battleship Idaho at Guam, Palau, Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Marine Generals Retired

Four Marine Corps Generals, with an aggregate of 135 years' service, were retired this week. They are Brig. Gens. Robert Blake, William A. Worton, Louis R. Jones, and Merritt B. Curtis.

Generals Blake, Jones, and Worton were advanced to the rank of major general, having been specially commended for their performance of duty in actual combat.

At the same time, the Marine Corps announced the promotion of Col. Edwin A. Pollock to the rank of brigadier general. Former Military Secretary to the Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Pollock became Director of the Division of Plans and Policies, succeeding General Ray A. Robinson.

General Robinson, whose recent selection to the rank of major general has been approved by the President, was named Inspector General of the Marine Corps, succeeding General Blake.

General Jones, who left the post of President of the Marine Corps Equipment Board, was succeeded by Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, former Chief of Staff of the Board.

Col. John Halla had previously succeeded General Curtis as Chief of the Disbursing Branch, Supply Department, Headquarters, Marine Corps, on 8 June. The Colonel, who is also Chief of the Administrative Branch of the Supply Department, has been selected for the rank of brigadier general.

No relief was named for General Worton. He had been in command of the First Marine Division at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Capt. Wallace To Great Lakes

The Ninth District is the Navy's largest.

Army Honors USMC Col.

Atlanta, Ga., witnessed Armed Forces cooperation when Col. Donald Spicer, USMC, retired 30 June after 32 years of service. Since there are few Marines in the Atlanta area, Third Army troops staged the traditional retirement review for the Marine colonel. Guests from all branches of the Armed Forces were present on the reviewing stand.

Colonel Spicer enlisted in the Corps in May, 1917. He was commissioned in October of the same year and served during World War I aboard the battleship New Mexico.

The colonel's service between the two world wars included duty in the U. S., Haiti, Nicaragua and at sea. When World War II began, he was executive officer of the Marine Barracks on Guam and was captured by the Japanese when that island fell to the enemy.

Colonel Spicer was selected by his fellow prisoners to raise the American flag over the prison camp when they were released 45 months later. For his service to his fellow prisoners in organizing, directing and participating in entertainment, promoting religious services and teaching Spanish classes, he was commended by the Secretary of the Navy.

The Spicer family has long been in the service, for both Colonel and Mrs. Spicer's fathers were Marine officers and both of the colonel's grandfathers were naval officers. Even upon the colonel's retirement the family will continue to serve the nation through the efforts of the two oldest Spicer sons—one a Marine lieutenant and the other a Navy doctor.

Navy Retires Two Admirals

At the same time, Commo. Tully Shelley, recently Naval Attaché and Naval Attaché for Air at the U. S. Embassy in London, was retired and advanced to the rank of Rear Admiral.

Both officers had been recently transferred to duty in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations, pending retirement.

Air Rates for Military Travel

A 10 per cent discount on basic airline fares for all passenger travel purchased by military agencies has been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board by the Air Transport Association's Air Traffic Conference, on behalf of all U.S. domestic member airlines. The new tariff became effective 1 July.

The filing of the tariff is pursuant to an urgent request by the military agencies and is the result of several months of negotiations by the Air Transport Association, airline and military officials. Vice Adm. Emory S. Land, USN-Ret., is president of the Air Transport Association.

The reason for the move, according to M. F. Redfern, Executive Secretary of the Air Traffic Conference, is the indication from the military agencies that such a discount will result in much greater use of commercial air transportation by the military agencies, which formerly under agreement, were restricted almost exclusively to the use of rail transportation.

The ATA announcement states that the airlines have been given full assurance that rules, regulations and instructions to be issued by the military governing the purchase of passenger transportation will serve to place the selection of air transportation on a fair competitive basis.

Officials estimate that the granting of the 10 per cent discount to military personnel using travel requisitions will raise the percentage of all military travel now carried by air from between 2 and 4 per cent to between 10 and 12 per cent of the total.

It was revealed that the Office of the Secretary of National Defense has directed the Munitions Board to make a comprehensive study of all traffic problems of all military agencies, with a view to better understanding of the types of travel purchase arrangements which should be consummated beginning with the fiscal year 1951.

To facilitate the handling of the new tariff and the routing operations for military traffic traveling by air, the Air Traffic Conference has established a Military Bureau at its headquarters, of which Frank Macklin will be director. The Military Bureau will handle the routing of group movements of passengers with accompanying cargo and sizable cargo shipments presented to them by the military agencies.

The tariff filed by the ATA pertains to all passenger traffic which is furnished on Transportation Requests issued by the military agencies, the cost of which is payable from appropriations available to the military services. The tariff covers, besides traffic between points in the continental U.S. exclusive of Alaska, traffic by air between such points and the border points Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Windsor, Winnipeg, Lethbridge and Vancouver.

Terms and conditions of the military air transportation tariff to be filed by the Air Traffic Conference include:

1. Passengers, either singly or in groups, will be transported at applicable tariff fares, charges and surcharges, less 10 per cent.

2. Free baggage allowances will be made for passengers not on permanent change-of-station orders in accordance with the applicable tariffs. Those on permanent change-of-station orders will be granted 60 pounds free baggage per passenger.

3. Excess baggage will be carried at regular rates, less 10 per cent, except if it is over 100 pounds, prior arrangement must be made with the air carrier.

4. Military gear and equipment accompanying passengers will be carried as baggage and quantities exceeding the free baggage allowance will be carried at regular excess baggage rates less 10 per cent, except if the amount is over 100 pounds, prior arrangement must be made.

5. Military gear and equipment not accompanying passengers will be carried at regular air freight rates. Carriers not having freight tariffs will carry such material at excess baggage rates less the 10 per cent discount.

6. Bodies of deceased persons will be transported at regular air freight rates where the service is offered under existing tariffs.

7. In case of interruptions of travel, passengers will be forwarded to their destinations by alternative air transportation or surface transportation. Unless food and lodging is provided in these cases by military agencies, the airlines agree to furnish such food and lodging until alternate transportation is available.

8. The fare and charge reductions referred to in the tariff will be in addition to all other reductions offered on regular fares by the airlines with the exception of fares for children under two years of age, ground transportation charges, service charges for failure to cancel reservations, family excursion fares, commutation fares, or promotional fares other than regular children's half fares, round-trip fares, circle-trip fares and open-jaw trip fares.

9. Transportation under the tariff will be provided to the extent of available equipment, facilities and personnel.

Hospitals Joint Staffed

Joint staffing of four Naval hospitals with Army medical personnel at St. Albans Hospital, Long Island, N.Y.; Corona and Long Beach Hospitals, Calif.; and Portsmouth Hospital, Portsmouth, Va., has been announced by Maj. Gen. R. W. Bliss, the Surgeon General of the Army.

The joint staffing of military hospitals was recommended by the Hawley Board last January in order to economize to the fullest extent possible on physicians and other scarce professional personnel and to reduce the number of hospitals. Under the plan, hospitals of the respective services allocate a certain number of beds for patients from other services. A total of 825 beds has thus been made available in these four hospitals for Army and Air Force patients.

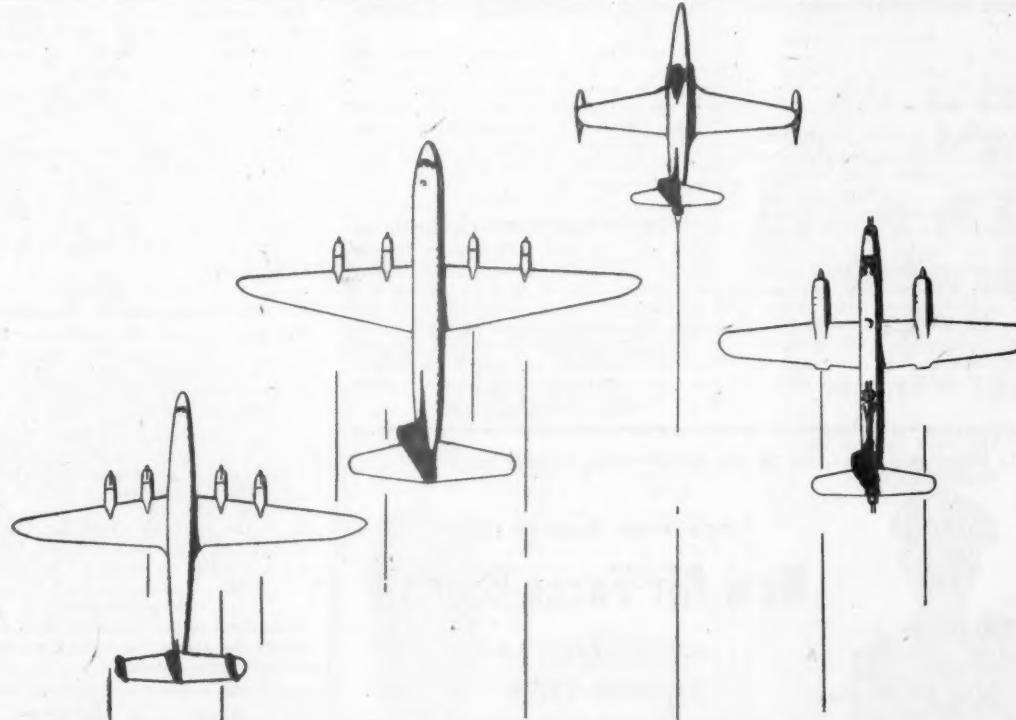

Nine Army Medical Corps officers are being assigned to St. Albans Hospital, which has allocated 450 beds to Army and Air Force patients. Allocation of these beds made it possible for the Army to close Ft. Totten General Hospital, Long Island, and to reduce Tilton General Hospital, Ft. Dix, N.J., to station hospital status, effective this week.

Three Army Medical Corps officers in residency training have been assigned to Portsmouth Naval Hospital, which has allocated 100 beds to the Army and Air Force.

At Corona and Long Beach Hospitals, a total of 300 beds have been turned over to the Army and Air Force, making it possible to close McCornack General Hospital by 30 June.

Members of the Dental Corps, Army Nurse Corps, Medical Service Corps, and Women's Specialist Corps and enlisted personnel are being assigned to these hospitals in proportionate numbers.

In a similar joint staffing procedure, the Navy recently assigned personnel for duty at the Army's Tripler General Hospital at Honolulu, Hawaii, where all Naval patients in the islands are now hospitalized.

Regular USAF Appointments

The President has nominated 31 Distinguished Aviation Cadets to be commissioned second lieutenants in the Regular Air Force.

The distinguished graduates were selected from 566 cadets who will be graduated 1 July from the advanced flying training schools of the aviation cadet program. All of the 31 distinguished cadets entered the course either from civilian life or had been selected for training from USAF non-commissioned ranks.

Of the remaining 535 members of the graduating class, 96 were officers enrolled in the course and the rest were personnel who entered the course as civilians or as non-commissioned officers. The enlisted cadets will receive commissions as second lieutenants in the USAF Reserve upon graduating, and during their three-year tours of active duty will have an opportunity to apply for Regular commissions under the provisions of the USAF integration program.

The advanced aviation cadet flying schools, where the graduation exercises are taking place, are: Barksdale AFB, Shreveport, La., and Enid AFB, Okla., graduating twin-engine pilots; and Las Vegas AFB, Nev., and Williams AFB, Chandler, Ariz., graduating single-engine and jet pilots.

Basic training is conducted at Perrin AFB, Sherman, Tex.; Goodfellow AFB, San Angelo, Tex.; Connally AFB, Waco, Tex.; and Randolph AFB, San Antonio, Tex.

New AF Navigator School

The Air Force will enlarge its Aviation Cadet program this fall by opening an Aviation Cadet Navigators School at Ellington Air Force Base, Houston, Tex.

The new school, designed to train navigators needed for aircrews of the latest types of transports and bombers, will be patterned after the aviation cadet pilot program in eligibility requirements and training. The first class will begin 1 Nov., and a new class will follow each month thereafter. Approximately 100 students will be enrolled in each class.

The cadet navigator course will be conducted in addition to the previously announced officer navigation training which will begin at Ellington AFB on a small scale this summer. During their year of instruction in the latest methods of radar navigation, the aviation cadet navigators will receive 184 hours of navigation instruction in "flying classrooms." For this purpose the Air Force will use a new type of trainer, the T-29, a version of the twin-engine Convair airliner, adapted for navigation training.

Nuclear Research For Planes

Dr. Miles C. Leverett, former director of the technical division of the Clinton Laboratories, has been appointed technical director of the NEPA Project of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Y., as Deputy for Operations. General Thatcher succeeds Col. Jacob E. Smart, who has served in that position since May 1948.

New Lockheed Jet Fighter

A new jet fighter aircraft designed to fly and fight in pitch darkness was announced this week by the U. S. Air Force and Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

A radically advanced version of the famous Lockheed F-80 Shooting Star jet fighter, the new aircraft, designated the F-94 by the Air Force, is a 24-hour night fighter. Its mission will be high-altitude interception, particularly under adverse conditions of weather and visibility.

The F-94 is a two-seat airplane, basically resembling the Air Force's new jet trainer, the TF-80C, which has been in service with USAF training units since the summer of 1948. With the same wing and fuselage structure as the standard Shooting Star fighter and the same Allison-built jet turbine engine, production of the new all-weather ship will require a minimum amount of new tooling. Lockheed will be able to build F-80 fighters, TF-80 trainers and the new F-94s on parallel assembly lines using the same major sub-assemblies for each type, providing important savings in both money and time.

Because of its similarity to a standard production model, the first airplane of the F-94 series is scheduled for completion much sooner than the minimum design and development period of 18 months for a new aircraft type.

Most striking difference between the F-94 and the familiar F-80 is the greatly extended nose section housing the new ship's radar equipment. Although details of this radar cannot be revealed for security reasons, the Air Force did state that the F-94, with this radar installation, is designed to search out and destroy aircraft after having been radio-directed to the vicinity of enemy planes by radar ground control.

In the F-94 the pilot will occupy the front cockpit, with the radar operator located in the rear cockpit. The radar operator will handle the radar to locate and intercept enemy aircraft.

Such interception can be accomplished under completely blind flying conditions, with ground radar (GCA) to bring the plane to a safe blind landing.

In addition to its other features, the F-94 includes a revolutionary new system for boosting the power of its Allison J-33 jet engine. This new system, known as afterburning, is a device to introduce fuel into the aft portion of the jet exhaust pipe behind the turbine wheel where it is ignited by spark plugs as it is sprayed into the hot exhaust gases from a grid shaped structure.

Air Sergeant to Turkey

M. Sgt. Thomas D. Lawrence, former communications chief with Headquarters 1802d AAC Group, Mitchel AFB, N. Y., has been selected as a member of the U. S. Military Mission for Aid to Turkey.

This is Sergeant Lawrence's second period of service with a Military Mission. In 1946 he was chosen to accompany the U. S. Military Mission to Brazil, where he served 18 months. While there, he was one of the military aides for President Truman and Secretary of State Marshall during the Rio de Janeiro Conference in Sept., 1947.

USAF Women Reserves

The Air Force has expanded its Reserve program to provide better utilization of women Reserves, authorizing their assignment to all units and all duties in the Reserve program, except those in the combat categories.

In a move to encourage participation of women already in the Air Force Reserve, as well as former WAC's who held AAF assignments during the war and currently hold no Reserve status, the Air Force Reserve program has begun recruiting women Reservists up to two per cent of the strength of the total Reserve program. This would mean training spaces for approximately 1,540 women in the Organized Reserve, and an undetermined number in volunteer units. Women Reservists desiring assignment in the Reserve program should apply directly to the Headquarters of the Air Force in their area of the United States.

Assigned to AF Selection Board

Although Air Force officials declined this week to reveal the names of members of the selection board meeting to choose approximately 700 officers for temporary promotion to major, it was reported that Brig. Gen. R. K. Taylor is one member of that board.

General Taylor left his post as commanding general of the Brookley AFB, Ala., on 17 June for approximately 42 days in Washington on an Air Force Officer Promotion Board. The major board began its work on 20 June and was expected to complete review of about 8,000 officer records in 45 days.

First AF Coed OCSC

The Air Force on 30 June graduated its first co-educational Officer Candidate Class, with 238 men and 16 women receiving commissions as second lieutenants in the Air Force Reserve. Effective date of the commissions was 1 July.

The graduation exercises were held at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex., where the OCS students have been attending classes for the past six months. Maj. Gen. Charles W. Lawrence, Commanding General of the Indoctrination Division of Air Training Command, presented diplomas to the graduates, and Col. Alexander R. MacMillen, Inspector General of the Training Command, delivered the graduation address.

Official AAF History

Volume II of the official seven-volume history of the Army Air Forces will be released this month. It is titled "Europe: Torch to Pointblank," and covers the period from Aug. 1942 to Dec. 1943. The new book describes AAF operations in the Middle East through 1942, the landings in North Africa, the Tunisian campaign, the conquest of Pantelleria and Sicily, and the southern Italian campaign to the end of 1943; the development of daylight bombing by the Eighth Air Force, the early days of the Combined Bomber Offensive, the build-up of the Eighth in 1943, and its operations to the end of the year, and discusses the reorganizations which established the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces (MAAF), the Allied Expeditionary Air Forces (AEAF), and the United States Strategic Air Forces (USSTAF).

Personal copies may be purchased from the University of Chicago Press, Chicago, Ill., from book stores, and from Air Force and Army exchanges.

New Republic Thunderjet

The Air Force and Republic Aviation Corporation revealed this week the existence of a still newer version of the F-84 Thunderjet, with increased power derived from its turbo-Jet engine and designed to provide greater performance in speed, range and altitude.

Known as the F-84-E, this latest model Thunderjet is the result of operational experiences in the field translated into improved features by Republic engineers, along with a 25 per cent increase in power from the Allison J-35-A-17 engine. The power improvement, made by engineers of the Allison Division of General Motors, raises the thrust (dry) from 4,000 to 5,000 pounds.

As a result, the 600-mile-per-hour speed of the Thunderjet is materially increased. Radius of action, formerly rated at 600 miles, is now better than 850 miles. The Thunderjet's service ceiling is now set at above 45,000 feet in the "E" version. This additional performance improves the efficiency of the plane, for ground support operations, interceptor, and penetration requirements.

Firepower for ground support and other purposes includes six 50-cal. machine guns, eight 5-inch HVAR (high velocity aircraft rockets), two thousand pounds of bombs, two 100 or 500-pound fragmentation clusters, aircraft depth charges, incendiary bombs, and napalm tanks. Combinations of the above may be used, according to the mission required. The cleanliness of the Thunderjet design is preserved through retractable or jettisonable rocket and bomb holders.

Improved maintenance and accessibility is provided for by means of some 180 access doors, enabling ground crews to service the plane rapidly between missions—and such items as retractable battery lift, hinged gun deck, guide rails, snap-on electrical leads and throttle disconnects for rapid engine interchangeability.

In addition to increased structural strength, the fuselage is 15 inches longer in the nose section to allow more room and comfort for the pilot in the cockpit. Additional structure in the wing and empennage sections will enable the airplane to withstand greater "G" loads than are actually called for in the Air Force requirements. Aerodynamic fins on the tip tanks enable the airplane to go through maneuvers even under full load conditions with tip tanks on, the first time this has been possible with any jet fighters to date. A new and improved cabin pressurization and air-conditioning system is provided for maximum pilot conditions at all altitudes and at extremely low or extremely high outside temperatures.

The first Air Force group to be equipped with the new F-84-E's will be the 23d Fighter Group, Howard AFB, Canal Zone. Other groups scheduled to receive "E" models have not yet been announced.

commanded, gave new dignity to the spirit of America. I resent the implication that these war leaders are less able or less willing to discharge their duties in peace, reject the theory that they think narrowly and rigidly in terms of war. I oppose any effort to force them into secondary citizenship.

"You gentlemen can leave this institution with pride in the training you have received and with greater pride in what you symbolize—the ability of the American democracy to fuse professional soldiering with a love of liberty. If at any time in the future you find yourself being called a brass hat take it as a compliment. I would be proud to be known as one."

committee felt it should be made clear that these men would continue to receive quarters in kind.

The House contingent appearing before the committee on Thursday included Representatives Walter Norblad (R-Ore.), Pat Sutton (D-Tenn.) and Foster Furculo (D-Mass.). They said they also spoke for Representatives John Bell Williams (D-Miss.), Eugene J. McCarthy (D-Minn.), and Richard Bolling (D-Mo.). These Congressmen had opposed a number of features of the Pay Bill when it was debated in the House and had submitted a number of amendments which were voted down by the House.

While these members favored higher pay for enlisted men and junior officers than was provided in the House Bill or the Hoot Report they devoted much of their attention to attacks on the flight pay provisions of the bill. They insisted that all crew members in a combat plane incurred the same hazards and therefore should receive the same amount of extra compensation for this risk. In the House those in charge of the bill took the position that the so-called hazard pay was in reality incentive pay, and that those with the greater skill and responsibilities should receive greater compensation, in order to encourage them to become proficient as aviators.

The Congressmen appearing before the Senate committee also felt that flight pay for those above the rank of lieutenant colonel should be eliminated, claiming that it was unnecessary for them to fly in order to carry out their duties. There was no indication that the Senate Committee would adopt the suggestions of the disinterested House members.

While Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D-Md.) and several members of the Senate Armed Services Committee have indicated that they favor the bill in substantially the form in which it passed the House no vote has yet been taken on any of its key provisions. However, observers are hopeful of favorable committee action next week and feel that prospects for passage of the bill by the Senate are excellent.

2d Division Association

Many distinguished officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps will be present, as members or speakers or both, at the three-day reunion of the Second Division Association at the Hotel New Yorker in New York City, starting 7 July. Honorary chairmen for the reunion are General Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the Marine Corps; Maj. Gen. Walter M. Robertson, combat commander of the Second Division in World War II and now Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army; and Maj. Gen. Roscoe B. Woodruff, Deputy Commander, First Army. Lt. Gen. Raymond McLean, Chief of Information, and Brig. Gen. Wendell Westover, Executive for Reserve and ROTC Affairs, will be among the speakers on the reunion program.

Among the highlights of the reunion will be the memorial service at the Eternal Light at Madison Square on the afternoon of 9 July and the informal banquet at the New Yorker on the evening of the same day. A notable feature of the banquet will be the return to the Veterans of Belleau Wood, U. S. Marine Brigade, Second Division, of the colors which this organization presented to USS Belleau Wood. Rear Adm. A. N. Pride, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, will represent the Navy in this ceremony.

THE planes flying the Berlin air lift this week completed a full year of highly successful operations in relieving the distress of two million residents of the German capital and preserving the rights and dignity of the western Democracies in spite of the Soviet effort to humble them in the eyes of the world. Though the Soviet Union lifted its rail and highway blockade of Berlin a few weeks ago the air lift continued, both because of the necessity of building up reserve stocks of fuel and food, and because a rail strike had prevented the resumption of normal traffic. With the settlement of the rail strike this week it is expected that the air lift will taper off and the crews will be able to enjoy the rest they so richly merit. During the year the air ferry moved two million tons of vital supplies to the western sectors of Berlin, and freed millions of Germans from the menace of starving and freezing. While the statistics of the remarkable achievement are impressive, the effects of this magnificent operation are too far reaching to be measured in terms of tons carried and miles flown. It may be that the prompt initiation and the successful maintenance of the air lift prevented a third World War. Certainly, the operation changed the contemporary history of Europe and materially eased international tensions. Its success lessened or erased the fear of Soviet dominance of Western European democracies and forced the Russians reluctantly to seek the conciliation of the West. This operation is a striking demonstration of the future of Military aviation as a powerful instrument of national policy in peace, as well as in war.

THE retirement from the Army this week of Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons deprives the National Military Establishment and the Congress of one of the most capable legislative officers ever to represent the Armed Forces. General Persons had the rare faculty of being able to serve both the Executive and the Legislative Branches of the Government to the notable satisfaction of both, even when their interests appeared to conflict. Added to General Persons' thorough knowledge of the Military Establishment and its requirements was his keen appreciation of the viewpoint of the members of both Houses of Congress, all of whom had complete confidence in his judgment and his seasoned knowledge. The Secretary of Defense and the Congress will greatly miss his services. On retiring from the Army General Persons becomes head of Staunton Military Academy, a preparatory school for boys, succeeding in that post Brig. Gen. Earl Mac Farland whose health recently led him to retire. General Persons is ideally qualified for the post, and his long and successful military career will be an inspiration for the young students under his guidance. He takes with him the admiration and affection of members of Congress and thousands of associates in the Armed Forces.

IN a recent address at Omaha, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, gave an interesting preview of possible Naval warfare of the future, with the submarine in a dominant role. With the United States in possession of by far the world's strongest surface fleet the days of marine duels of battleships are definitely of the past. No potential enemy would think of challenging our supremacy. This does not mean that our ships would be immune from attacks by hostile aircraft and undersea raiders. As Admiral Denfeld declares we are resolved that American defense will not be passive, we will carry the war to the enemy. The battlefields will be on distant continents. Despite the spectacular rise of air power the great bulk of our troops and supplies will be transported by surface fleets to overseas combat. The sea lanes must be protected by Naval air, surface and sub-surface craft. The Admiral points out that this protection can best be provided by carrying the war to enemy air and submarine bases, destroying hostile raiders at their home fields and ports. In such operations the submarine becomes increasingly important for both offensive and defensive missions. Indeed sea power of the future may be built around the submarine. As Admiral Denfeld so aptly phrases it, "Just as the submarine replaced the frigate, as the carrier superseded the battleship, so might dreadnaughts of the deep, progeny of our modern submarines, become the capital ships of tomorrow." A realistic Congress will do well to provide our Navy with an ample fleet of modern subsurface craft, and with adequate submarine defenses.

Letters to the Editor

Letters expressing individual views and intended for publication should be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as evidence of good faith. If the writer desires to omit his name when the letter is published, he should so state. The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL may find it necessary to use only extracts from longer letters in order that more viewpoints may be represented.

Riding Gov't Autos?

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

Where did some of these Congressmen get the idea that officers are riding around in Government cars on private business and are using enlisted men for servants regularly? I was in service for years and never saw any of this, except in a very few instances, where there was always a big crackdown upon the offender eventually.

Some of these objecting Congressmen ought to try raising a family being moved around all over continually, having to grab whatever places possible to live, having furniture, etc., broken at each move, having to fix up new home to live in at each move, having to pay for family at home while having to pay own mess bill, and expenditures in addition when on field service and foreign duty, buy uniforms and accessories to fit various climates, (with no cut rate attire allowable either), etc.

C. G. Young, (Col. USA-Ret.)

Honor U. S. Naval Victories

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

It is my understanding that the three stripes on the collar of our naval uniforms follow the pattern used on British naval uniforms. They are symbolic of the three great naval victories, that of the Nile, Copenhagen and Trafalgar.

It is respectfully suggested that our naval uniforms have four collar stripes, symbolic of the American naval victories of Flamborough Head (war of the Revolution), Battle of Lake Erie (war of 1812), Battle of Manila Bay (Spanish-American war), and one of the naval battles of World War II, such as Guadalcanal, Leyte Gulf, etc.

A Soldier-Father

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

On Father's Day our minister, a former Army Chaplain, used a quotation from a back issue of Magazet (Oct., '45) written by one of our finest men, General of the Army Douglas MacArthur. It made such an impression on the entire congregation, that I think it would be fitting to let more of our fathers read it and share the worthwhile message.

"General Douglas MacArthur, Washington, D. C.: By profession I am a soldier, and take pride in that fact. But I am more proud, infinitely more, to be a father. A soldier destroys in order to build; a father only builds, never destroys. The one has the potentialities of death, the other embodies creation and life. While the hordes of death are mighty, the battalions of life are mightier still. It is my hope that my son, when I am gone, will remember me not from the battles, but in the home, repeating with him our simple daily prayer, 'Our Father, Who art in heaven.'"

Perhaps I am prejudiced, being a Sunday School teacher, and my husband's father a minister, but I do think the Army & Navy readers would enjoy it.

Both my husband, an Army Air Force man, and I enjoy the JOURNAL thoroughly, and look forward to its weekly arrival.

Rear Adm. Thorvald A. Solberg, USN, was sworn in as Chief of Naval Research on 1 July, succeeding Rear Adm. Paul F. Lee, who retired this week. Admiral Solberg, who has been serving as a member of the Military Liaison Committee to the Atomic Energy Commission, took the oath of office from Rear Adm. George L. Russell, Navy Judge Advocate General.

50 Years Ago

It is rather remarkable that with the retirement of Col. A. T. Smith, there are left only two colonels of infantry who are graduates of the Military Academy. Of the Cavalry colonels two are graduates. In the course of a few years the boot will be on the other foot. Then, and for many years, the non-graduate will be a rarity among the field officers.

The bill rejecting the substitute for the Enrollment Bill was reconsidered and adopted. It authorizes the President to call at any time for any number of volunteers for one, two, or three years. Every volunteer or substitute who may be accepted for one year, unless sooner discharged, shall be paid a bounty of $200, for two years $300, and for three years $400, to be paid at stated intervals.

A SURVEY of Coast Guard vessel strength showed this week that at the end of fiscal year 1949 there were a total of 378 ships in the Coast Guard, of which 203 are active, 22 inactive and 63 in the Reserve Fleet.

By classes, the Coast Guard has 42 patrol gunboats, four icebreakers, 36 patrol craft, four ocean-going tugs, five cargo ships, 108 buoy tenders, 41 small tugs, 89 small patrol vessels, 10 buoy boats, 38 lightships and one training vessel.

In the patrol craft category are 18 311', six 327', 13 255', three 250', one of which is to be sold, and two 165' ships.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Recent elections in Europe and in Canada disclose a definite swing away from Communism wherever the ballot is free. The decline in Red strength was particularly noticeable in Holland and Belgium. In both of these countries the parties of the right scored notable gains, while left-wing elements failed to develop sufficient popular support to make them a serious factor in the voting.

In Belgium the Social Christian party, supporting the return of Leopold to the throne, barely missed securing absolute control of both houses of parliament. In this week's election it secured a majority of the Senate and took 105 of the 212 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, a gain of 12. If this party had secured a majority in each house it would have called for a popular referendum on the return of the king. Agitation for such a referendum is certain to develop as a result of the election. While Prince Charles, brother of Leopold, is an able and popular leader, the Belgian people regard his regency as a temporary expedient and would probably vote for the return of the monarch, particularly if he would agree to an early abdication in favor of his eldest son.

The old Belgian government was formed by a coalition of the Social Christians and the Socialists. The coalition cabinet of Premier Paul Henri Spaak, in accordance with custom, resigned following the election. M. Spaak's party, the Socialists, won 66 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, a loss of three. The most significant gain was that of the Liberals, a Conservative group, which increased their membership from 17 to 30. The Communists lost 11 seats and will be without influence in the new parliament.

In Canada Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent's middle-of-the-road Liberals this week won a landslide victory, the greatest in Canadian history. The Liberals won 193 of 262 seats in Commons, a gain of 68; the Progressive Conservatives, the opposition party, held 42, a loss of 27; the Commonwealth Federation, a socialist group, secured 12 seats, with the remainder scattered among the Social Credit Union of Alberta, and Independents. Nineteen Communists were candidates and were defeated. The victory of Mr. St. Laurent was well received in United States and appeared to guarantee another five years of friendly co-operation.

The decline in Communist strength, particularly in Western Europe, as evidenced by election returns, is variously attributed to the success of the Berlin air lift, Marshall Plan aid, and the North Atlantic Pact. The principal danger of a Communist resurgence in Western European countries would arise out of an economic collapse, an improbable, but not impossible eventuality. The European Recovery Program was designed to bolster the economy of the war-torn democracies and it has succeeded to a remarkable degree. However, England at present appears to be approaching an early economic crisis that could have serious repercussions throughout Western Europe.

The main difficulty in England is shortage of dollar exchange. That country is experiencing a declining export market, due largely to high prices, and, therefore, has had to draw heavily on its reserves to pay for food and other essential imports. Many observers feel that the pound sterling is overvalued at $4.03, and that prompt revaluation at around $3.00 is a logical and a desirable development. Because of such a possibility larger holders of British pounds in France, Belgium and Holland are delaying buying English goods, in the hope of getting more for their money. Foreign customers of British factories are dissatisfied with blocked currency and feel that it should seek its natural exchange rate in a free world market. The British government opposes such a violent readjustment, but may be compelled to take some drastic action to stimulate declining foreign trade.

Practically all of western Berlin's 16,000 railway strikers are back at work but it may be a week before the volume of rail traffic reaches its pre-blockade level. The air lift continues to serve Berlin and there are no immediate plans for ending it. However, the amount of supplies carried by air will probably taper off as soon as satisfactory reserve stocks of food and fuel are provided.

American bombers and fighter planes participated in air exercises this week over England. United States super-bombers and fighters joined in simulated attacks on London and other cities. Umpires held that raids on London were repelled by Royal Air Force flyers and other defense forces. However, diversionary raids on shipping in the Mersey River near Liverpool and on industrial plants in the Midlands theoretically caused great damage.

United States troops left Korea this week two days ahead of the 1 July deadline. At the same time there were new reports of border clashes of North Korean Communists and nationalist troops. The United Nations Commission at Seoul made several fruitless efforts to confer with Red Korean leaders with a view to finding a peaceful solution of current difficulties. The situation is explosive and the withdrawal of American troops may be the occasion of wide-spread civil strife.

The first of the Japanese war prisoners held by the Russians for the past four years were repatriated this week. The released prisoners arrived chanting Communist songs. Evidently those who had embraced the Red cause were given preference in returning to their homeland, where they may be expected to cause considerable trouble for the Japanese government and the occupation authorities. A Japanese naval officer among those returned estimated that 20 per cent of the prisoners had joined the Communist party and 60 per cent were sympathetically inclined toward it.

The United States and Great Britain have informed the Chinese nationalist government that they will not recognize the paper blockade of Communist-held ports in China. They do not believe the nationalists have the naval and air strength to make such a blockade effective.

Retirement Problem Cited—Letters to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL praising the Army's recent action in amending the retirement processing for enlisted personnel serving on extended active duty cite a new problem which merits official recognition. This problem concerns men who are on active duty as Reserve officers but who do not hold permanent first grade warrants. Actually, some permanent grades are as low as corporal, this because the individuals involved have served for so many years in commissioned status.

One letter from a captain observes that as a result of recently published SR 135-215-5, which removes at the end of the current category commitment the guarantee for first grade appointment upon separation from active duty reenlistment, he and others may be penalized. It is contended that immediately after the war, many officers accepted separation and reenlisted to acquire permanent first grade status. Subsequently, many of these men were recalled to active duty. On the other hand, a number of other Reserve officers with prior enlisted service remained on active duty, many of them at the request of the Army. Thus, they did not obtain the security of the first grade status and as a result must now reenlist at the end of their current category commitment in order to obtain first grade status. Letters to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL express the belief that the Army should issue a certificate of eligibility for first grade appointments to these officers and thereby permit them to continue on active duty as officers.

Secretary Johnson on Service Education—Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson intends to press for overhauling of the Military and Naval Academies as well as for construction of a third Academy. His views concerning Service education are presented in a signed article in the 1 July issue of "American Magazine."

It is Secretary Johnson's plan to initiate a common curriculum in all three Service schools for the first two to three years. "Under this cross-education program which we contemplate, our future officers, at the very start of their careers, will be instilled with a common purpose and a common goal," he writes.

Also reported by Secretary Johnson in this article is his plan to assign a new chief of staff or vice chief of staff to duty three months sooner than has been the practice heretofore. During these three months, he will spend six weeks in the other two Services, "learning what the wheels go round."

Concerning inter-service transfers, Secretary Johnson writes that "we hope to ease the long-standing barriers between Services in order to permit an interchange of officers between Services, just as, in the past, Army men have transferred from cavalry to quartermaster and from infantry to field artillery."

Air Chaplain Reserve—Four Air Force chaplains will meet at USAF Headquarters 11 July to draft plans for the establishment of a program for reserve AF chaplains. This follows the recent establishment of an independent chaplains corps in the Air Force. Members of the special committee are Chaplains (Lt. Col.) Constantine Zillenski and (Maj.) Silas Meekel, reservists called to active duty for this specific task; (Col.) Ray Reynolds, a reserve chaplain on active duty as chief chaplain for the Continental Air Command; and (Maj.) The dental officers will be able to sit in on the round table discussion which will be transmitted over long distance telephone and received by direct wire at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Illinois. Thirty-six nationally known men will present the latest advances in six different phases of dentistry which will include caries control, dentistry for children, oral diagnosis and cancer control, the masticatory mechanism, dental education, and public health.

Alaskan Air Command—An Air Force C-47 of the 72d Photo Reconnaissance Squadron touched down on the Ladd AFB runway recently, completing 311 hours and 30 minutes of flying time for one month, shattering previous Ladd AFB and Alaskan Air Command records and establishing what is believed to be an all-time Air Force high. Primarily responsible for the new mark is the transport's ground crew—S. Sgt. Merrill R. Hopkins, flight engineer and crew chief, and Cpl. Billy R. Ramsey, assistant flight engineer and assistant crew chief.

Reserve Chaplains Conference—Catholic, Jewish and Protestant Chaplains who are members of the Army, Naval and Air Force Reserve in New York and New Jersey, held a joint planning and training conference for four days starting 27 June. Australian Navy—With the arrival in Australia recently of the Royal Australian Navy's new 14,000-ton aircraft carrier, HMAS Sydney, the Australian Navy's current five-year expansion program will gather speed. The second carrier, to be named HMAS Melbourne, will arrive next year to join the first naval aviation department of the RAN and to take its place in the developing carrier force. The naval program provides for the establishment of a strong and compact striking force of 26 ships with a reserve of 80 vessels. It will be capable of operating independently as a task force or in cooperation with greater Allied naval forces. By 1952 the RAN will have in commission the two light fleet carriers, two cruisers, six new destroyers, and 16 other vessels, including frigates, survey ships, minesweepers and boom defense vessels. They will be manned by 14,750 men, or two and one-half times the strength before the war.

Quartermaster Corps—Col. Bernard L. Robinson will be succeeded by Lt. Col. Ellsworth I. Davis as District Engineer, Galveston, Tex. Col. Donald S. Burns and Col. Raymond B. Oxrieder have been appointed members of the Corps of Engineers Constructive Credit Board. They succeed Col. Henry J. Woodbury and Col. Frank H. Forney. Other members are Col. Robert J. Fleming, Jr., and Capt. William F. Mullin, recorder.

Ferguson, a civilian engineer who was a Chief Warrant Officer when he designed the timer. The first model, later modified, was built in a month with the aid of five men. Announcement was delayed pending protection of patent rights. Mr. Ferguson recently completed a long career in the Army. By automatically punching the station identification and the time when transmission was completed upon the paper tapes connected to a maximum of 100 teletypewriter circuits, operators are relieved of the necessity of making a manual notation of time of dispatch. Automatic timing of military messages has been found important, since it permits analysis and correction of transmission delays. By the addition of more circuits, the message timer can be enlarged to serve many more machines.

Mr. Baruch and President Disagree—Elder Statesman Bernard M. Baruch, who accused President Truman of blocking action on mobilization plans, in an address at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces this week, was "badly informed" according to a White House official. Mr. Baruch said in his speech that "Additional delay is a needless gamble with our national security—a needless invitation to disaster." When informed of the White House announcement, he emphatically declared, "My statement goes. I'm not misinformed."

Unification Act Amendments

Legislation, already passed by the Senate, which would amend the National Security Act of 1947, was taken out of the "deep freeze" this week by Chairman Carl Vinson (D.Ga.) and the House Armed Services Committee.

As House hearings on the Tydings unification bill began, testimony was featured by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's appeal for increased authority and by the Hon. Herbert Hoover's general approval of the measure despite his opposition to the naming of a chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to be "principal military adviser to the President and Secretary of Defense."

Both Secretary Johnson and Mr. Hoover were in agreement, however, that passage of the unification amendments would result in savings of at least $1,000,000,000 a year. But again this week, as invariably has been the case in the past, a cataloging of specific savings was not presented. Secretary Johnson, asked by Chairman Vinson to blueprint possible savings answered that for "security reasons" this information could not be provided at the present time.

Mr. Hoover said "there is no doubt that great economies can be brought about by this legislation without lowering the efficiency of the defense arm," and explained that the task force on national security of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government placed these economies at $1,500,000,000 annually.

The issue concerning the authority and powers of the proposed JCS chairman, whom the Senate bill would make the No. 1 officer of the Armed Services, is the single point of consequence where the unification amendments depart from the majority recommendation of the Commission, Mr. Hoover said.

Questioned during his testimony as to the future status of the separate Services, Secretary Johnson labeled as "lies" reports which held that he wanted to abolish the Navy air arm or curtail the Marine Corps.

The decision of the House Armed Services Committee to take up consideration of the Senate-passed bill was received with some surprise, since Chairman Vinson previously had expressed a lack of interest in its provisions and had said that the bill was in the "deep freeze."

One report in circulation this week was that the action of the House committee in considering the unification amendments may enhance the prospects for passage by the Senate of pay raises for members of the Armed Services. Just as Chairman Vinson and his committee members reportedly are more eager for adoption of new pay scales than for enactment of the unification amendments, so the Senate was said to be interested in the two pieces of legislation in reverse priority. It was suggested that the House action may prompt earlier Senate debate on the pay bill.

THE newly appointed Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews has taken an apartment at the Mayflower, which he will occupy during the summer. Mrs. Matthews will be at their summer home at Ely, Minn., where the Secretary will join her when official duties permit. Their grown children, all married but one daughter, will, with their families, join the family circle at Ely at vacation times.

Mrs. Clarence A. Tinsman has closed her home at Cambridge, Md., preparatory to sailing 7 July from San Francisco to join Colonel Tinsman at Clark Field. Colonel Tinsman recently became Surgeon of the XIII Air Force at Clark Field, going there from duty at Okinawa.

Maj. Gen. W. T. Clement having been assigned to duty at the Marine Recruit Depot at San Diego, he and Mrs. Clement are shortly leaving Washington. Before their departure they bade many friends adieu at a cocktail party the other afternoon. In the company were the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Louis Denfeld, Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Cates, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. O. P. Smith, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John T. Selby, Admiral and Mrs. Harold R. Stark, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Robert B. Carney, and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle.

Before going to the West Coast, General and Mrs. Clement will go to Nantucket, Mass., for a vacation.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. James O'Hara, after three years in Germany, are back in Washington. The latter was Miss Eleanor Harding, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Forrest Harding who met them when their ship docked in New York, escorting them to Washington, where they are now visiting Colonel O'Hara's mother, Mrs. William H. Cowles, and Colonel Cowles at 3719 Reservoir Road. Colonel O'Hara has been ordered to Louisiana for duty with the National Guard.

Maj. Gen. Edmond H. Leavey, Army Controller, retires this week and he and Mrs. Leavey will leave on a motor trip of no-planning—they will leave town and go where fancy prompts them. Canada will likely be the first destination, and Mexico is also in their thoughts. In the meantime, if they find no place they like better than the eastern seaboard, they will settle in Virginia or Maryland on a farm. Obituaries

Col. I. B. Hauge, DC, USA-Ret.

Col. Ingolf B. Hauge, retired dental officer, died 20 June, in St. Cloud, Minn., of a heart attack.

Colonel Hauge was born 21 Sept. 1893, in Benson, Minn., and after graduation from University of Minnesota Dental School, entered on active duty as a Reserve Officer. In 1930 he was appointed First Lieutenant, Dental Corps, Regular Army. He served through the various grades, reaching the temporary grade of full Colonel in June of 1943. Colonel Hauge was retired for physical disability in 1946, later establishing a civilian practice in St. Cloud. He is survived by his widow and three daughters, of St. Cloud, and two brothers and a sister.

Lt. Col. Raymond D. Johnson

Lt. Col. Raymond D. Johnson, ORC, eminent hydraulic engineer, died suddenly at his home in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., 28 June.

He was one of the few holders of the famous Holley Medal, presented by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. At one time he was a Lieutenant colonel of the Military Intelligence Reserve.

He was related to the following Army personnel: Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Walter K. Wilson of Washington, D. C.; Col. and Mrs. Charles M. Taylor, Dental Corps, on duty in Germany; Col. and Mrs. Walter K. Wilson, Jr., on duty in Mobile, Ala.; Lt. Col. and Mrs. Sanford W. Horstman; and Mrs. John N. Wilson, widow of Lt. Col. John N. Wilson, killed in action at St. Lo.

Mrs. Perry L. Miles

Mary Stott Miles, wife of Brig. Gen. Perry L. Miles, USA-Ret., died at Ocean City, Md., 23 June.

She was the daughter of Col. William A. Stott, a regimental commander of volunteers in the Civil War, and Clara Armstrong Stott, and was born 31 July 1878. Her only brother, Clarence, died as a result of winter campaigning against hostile Indians in 1907. She had no sisters and her brother had no children. As a consequence her nearest relatives are first cousins: Miss Annie M. Chandler of Coatesville, Pa.; Miss Mabel Parke of New York City; Miss Criss Stott of San Francisco, Calif.; Mr. Parke McClellan of Chester County, Pa.; and Miss Lida Baldwin of Philadelphia, Pa. She had numerous more distant cousins, many of whom were very dear to her.

Mrs. Miles will long be remembered by the host of friends she made in Washington during the several times she resided here. Gen-

Financial Digest

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System in its National Summary of Business Conditions this week announced further declines in industrial production during May and June. Prices of manufactured commodities, farm products and foods declined during June, but Department Store sales were maintained at a relatively high volume.

Steel production dropped from the March record of 103 per cent of rated capacity to 84 per cent during the week beginning 20 June. Activity in most industries manufacturing durable goods declined substantially. Construction increased somewhat, reflecting greater activity on public projects, while private awards were slightly smaller than in April and materially less than in a comparable period of a year ago. Total carloadings of rail freight, after seasonal adjustment, were about 12 per cent below last fall.

Federal revenue for the fiscal year which ended this week was substantially less than for several years. This was due primarily to reductions in income taxes, but it also reflected recent declines in business activity. If the trend continues there are indications of a substantial Treasury deficit during the current fiscal year, unless tax rates are increased or Federal expenditures drastically curtailed.

Disturbing news of the economic condition of Great Britain has had an unsettling effect on American security markets. Declines in British exports and resultant unfavorable trade balances may force the Labor government to devalue the pound or to impose drastic austerity restrictions on domestic consumption of imported goods. Either move is certain to prove unpopular.

eral Miles' last assignment here was as Commanding General, Military District of Washington from 1932 to 1935.

Although she belonged at various times to patriotic, charitable and service organizations, she was not a club woman. Her gracious hospitality and genuine friendliness endeared her to all who knew her in and out of the service. Her entire life was devoted to doing kindness and services for others.

Funeral services were held in the Chapel at Fort Myer, Va., at 3:00 P.M., Wednesday, 29 June, followed by interment in Arlington National Cemetery.

2d Lt. David R. Kingsley

Second Lt. David R. Kingsley, Medal of Honor winner from Portland, Ore., who gave his life to save a wounded tail gunner, will be reburied at 2 P.M., EDT, Wednesday, 6 July, in Arlington National Cemetery.

He is one of 18 servicemen recently recently returned to the United States, for whom re-burial ceremonies will be held at that time in Arlington. A guard of honor and firing party from the ceremonial company of the Third Infantry Regiment at Ft. Myer, Va., will render military honors, assisted by the U. S. Army Band.

He won the Medal of Honor on his 14th combat mission as a bombardier with the 341st Bomb Squadron, 97th Bomb Group, of the 15th Air Force in Italy. He was the first member of the 15th Air Force to be awarded the Nation's highest decoration.

On 23 June, 1944, Lieutenant Kingsley was bombardier on a B-17, which was part of the force attacking the oil refineries at Ploesti, Rumania. On the bomb run, his plane was severely damaged by flak and forced to drop out of formation, but the pilot proceeded over the target and Lieutenant Kingsley successfully dropped his bombs. Forced to lose altitude and lag behind the formation, the damaged plane was aggressively attacked by three German ME-109 fighters, causing more damage to the aircraft and wounding the tail gunner, Sgt. Michael J. Sullivan, in the upper arm. Lieutenant Kingsley applied first aid to Concentration in the Chairman of the Maritime Commission of the internal administration of the maritime agency is the principal purpose of President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 6, although he stated in his message to Congress that the plan leaves in the Commission as a body the performance of regulatory functions, determination of subsidies, and of major policies. One of seven sent to Congress this week by the President, Plan No. 6 indicates no transfer of Maritime Commission function to other agencies of the Government as had been recommended by the Hoover Commission report. Under terms of the Reorganization Act of 1949 (H.R. 2361) as approved by the President, a majority vote of either the Senate or House within 60 days of the submission of a Reorganization Plan in opposition to such plan will nullify the proposal.

Sun Oil Training Program

During the past several years more than a hundred employees from the Marine Department of the Sun Oil Company have completed the course conducted by the Naval Damage Control Training Center's fire-fighting school at Philadelphia. Designed to train ships' personnel to battle flames aboard vessels and to instill them with full confidence in fire-fighting equipment and techniques, instruction includes practical works on full-scale, dummy ship installations to prove the theory that fires can be extinguished quickly and safely if fear of flames is conquered. Such instruction demonstrates that oil fires can best be extinguished with water sprayed through specially-made nozzles.

the wound and checked the bleeding.

A few minutes later the plane was attacked again by eight enemy fighters and the pilot, seeing the plane was too badly damaged to reach safety, gave the order to bail out. When it was discovered that Sergeant Sullivan's parachute had been damaged, Lieutenant Kingsley unhesitatingly removed his own, placed it on the wounded man and helped him bail out. Shortly afterward, the plane crashed and burned. Sergeant Sullivan subsequently returned safely to his base.

Lt. Col. Arthur B. Proctor, USA-Ret.

Lt. Col. Arthur B. Proctor, USA-Ret., died 22 June in his home, 128 Marine Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., after a long illness. Colonel Proctor, 70, was a veteran of the Spanish-American and both World Wars, and was a former architect.

Born in Brooklyn, he saw action in Cuba in 1898 as a private in the First Regiment of Infantry, District of Columbia Volunteers.

Colonel Proctor attended in 1915 the first business and professional men's military training camp at Plattsburgh, N. Y., and in 1915-16 was a leader in various Rochester movements to prepare the nation for war.

Commissioned in 1917 an Infantry Reserve captain, he was called to active duty that year, serving first at Yaphank, L. I., and later at West Point, N. Y., where he did Military Police and Quartermaster Corps duty, remaining until 1919. After the war Colonel Proctor was continuously in the Quartermaster Corps until his retirement in 1942.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. May E. Proctor, and a daughter, Miss May Proctor of Brooklyn.
